Protect Your Personal Account Information

PFCU will never call, text message or email you asking for account-sensitive information, including your account number or home banking credentials. Never give out any personal account information. If you ever suspect fraudulent activity on your account, please contact the credit union immediately.

Learn more about Interchange

New interchange bill will hurt consumers and credit unions. Interchange fees not only protect consumers from data breaches by helping cover the cost of fraud detection, credit monitoring and fraudulent purchase protection, but they also support affordable access to credit. Changes to the current system would give more power to big-box retailers, while increasing risk for consumers, small businesses and credit unions. See why #InterchangeWorks here. Take action today! Tell your lawmakers to oppose changes to the credit card system by leveraging the easy-to-use Grassroots Take Action Center. We need to activate advocates like you to send a message to Congress explaining how this will hurt more than 135 million credit union members nationwide. Get started here.
